

Armenia

Displacement associated with Conflict and Violence

Figures Analysis – 2020

	Figure	Highlight	Methodology and Sources	Caveats and Challenges
New Displacement	800	This figure refers to displacement triggered by fighting between Armenia and Azerbaijan between September and November 2020 in the context of the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict.	This figure was obtained from the Permanent Representative of the Republic of Armenia to the UN Office and other international organisations in Geneva. It is based on the number of people internally displaced in in the Syunik and Gegharkunik provinces. IDMC also used reports of the Human Rights Defender of the Republic of Armenia on housing destruction in the Syunik and Gegharkunik provinces, for triangulation purposes.	We have medium confidence in this figure as IDMC was unable to verify the methodology used by the source. Figures used for triangulation purposes were lower than those reported by our primary source.
Total number of IDPs as of 31 December 2020  Pending further information and evidence, those who are in a situation of displacement, but progressing towards a durable solution have not been included.	800	This figure refers to displacement triggered by fighting between Armenia and Azerbaijan between September and November 2020 in the context of the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict.	This figure was obtained from the Permanent Representative of the Republic of Armenia to the UN Office and other international organisations in Geneva. It is based on the number of people internally displaced in in the Syunik and Gegharkunik provinces, in 2020. IDMC also used reports of the Human Rights Defender of the Republic of Armenia on housing destruction in the Syunik and Gegharkunik provinces, for triangulation purposes.	We have medium confidence in this figure due to the same caveats outlined above. Furthermore, this figure is based on the number of people internally displaced in 2020; in the absence of further information, IDMC assumes they remained displaced as of 31 December 2020.